Places for the Whole Community

Good towns need useful public spaces where people can meet, study, relax or exercise. A library, park or sports centre can support people of different ages.

A strong community facility should be safe, clean and accessible. This means that people can use it without unnecessary difficulty.

Community events can help local residents feel connected. They give people a reason to spend time together and make the area feel friendlier.

Because these places are shared spaces, everyone has a responsibility to respect others, keep them clean and report damage when needed.
